LARGE ENTERPRISE PROJECTED.

Protective Tariff Bringing to This Country French Capital for Great Woolen Mills.

S. G. Beale, of the firm of Charles Barre & Co., of New York, was in the city yesterday, and in course of conversation with a Journal reporter spoke freely of a gigantic enterprise which is taking form and will soon be in operation as a direct result and consequence of the McKinley law. "Mr. Barre," said Mr. Beale, "is the senior member of my firm, and is at the head of a corporation of Americans and Frenchmen who intend to go into the woolen manufacturing business in this country on a large scale. Mr. Barre will sail for France on Nov. 1, and return about the middle of February, when everything concerning the selected site and the plans will be made public."

"How much capital will be involved," inquired the reporter, and what kind of concerns will be manufactured from the site?"

"The plans of the corporation," said Mr. Beale, "include a two-million-dollar plant outside of New York but within less than a day's journey of that city. Mr. Barre and several Chicago gentlemen who have been looking the country over have come to the conclusion that the nearer they can get the mills to New York city the better. Two of the sites that have been considered are near Philadelphia, another at Providence, and the fourth at Pawtucket, R. I. The mills will be run on the French plan. We think that a better class of woolen goods are made in France than in America, and therefore we see no reason, as Mr. Barre expresses it, why we cannot sell a better quality of flannel goods in the future for a price at which American manufacturers now sell an inferior article. When these mills are established, as they will be, they will be an American institution and give employment to American workmen. There certainly can be no objection to the investment of French capital on this side of the water. While it will bring some skilled labor from the other side, certainly all skilled labor that comes to this country enriches us that much."

Commissioner Voyles's Successor.

The Governor, Secretary of State, Auditor and Treasurer yesterday elected Mahlon D. Hanson, of Crawfordville, a member of the State Soldiers' and Sailors' Commission, to succeed S. B. Voyles, resigned.

THE BURDEN OF GREAT DEBT

Each Voter, by Democratic Extravagance, Owes a Fair Week's Salary.

The Counties, Too, Must Bear Their Share in Large Amounts—Indications Favoring Republicans—Political Notes.

The Democratic party has saddled an enormous debt upon Indiana, and were that debt distributed in the ratio of the vote cast for Secretary of State in 1888 it would place upon each voter an indebtedness of about $16. The total vote so cast was 555,816, and the State debt is $8,840,615.12. A continuation of Democratic legislative control, with all that that implies, means the rapid growth of an already huge debt. Ten years more of Democratic extravagance and mismanagement would result in a debt of $20 for each voter to carry. To pay the interest on millions of dollars of indebtedness incurred by the Democracy is a hardship under which the people of Indiana are growing restive. The increased taxation necessary to pay this interest is a burden which will never be lightened while the Democrats are in control of the Legislature. The present debt, distributed among the counties on the ratio above referred to, would place upon each county an indebtedness as follows:

Granville S. Wright, who has had charge of the assignment of speakers for the Republican State central committee, was busy yesterday in completing the list of meetings for the remaining days of the campaign. He had in front of him a large folio, page after page of which was filled with speakers' names and the counties to which they had been assigned. "Every one of the speakers," said Mr. Wright, as he jotted down another name and place, "brings in excellent reports. If we get out the vote to which we are entitled we will elect the State ticket and carry the lower house of the Legislature." The meetings, to be held until the 1st of November, inclusive, will be 180, and, in addition to these, every school district in the State, Friday and Saturday evenings, will have a meeting. This is only a continuation of the plan that has been pursued throughout the campaign. The interest manifested has been that of an ordinary presidential year, and almost equal to that of two years ago. Yesterday assignments were made for fifty meetings last night, forty-eight this evening, forty-six for tomorrow night and forty-two on the 1st of November. With these the speaking will practically close.

It was the general expression at the Republican county committee's room, yesterday, that conditions supporting the best hopes of success in this county were increasing. The rooms all day and evening were full of workers from each precinct, coming and going, each showing that cheerful activity is characterizing the Republican efforts in this county. It has been a fight against great odds, against a lavish expenditure of money, malicious lies quietly circulated and the powerful court-room ring. This ring is the successor of the Coy gang, and has absorbed all that was damnable in political methods from its predecessor in the control of the local Democracy. The election of Taggart, Wilson and Backus would mean a return to the old days, when those great support come from Coy and the crowd he manages. But the fulfillment of that evil possibility seems to be getting further and further away from the gang as its throat-cutting policy is pursued. As developed within the last two or three days, there are two conflicting Democratic forces at work in this county, one to secure the election of the legislative ticket and the other to keep Taggart in office. Between the two the other candidates are being crushed, with Wilson and Backus only of sufficient force to keep close to Taggart. The political treachery of which the three are guilty in sacrificing Osterman to save themselves a return to the old days, when those great support come from Coy and the crowd he manages. As developed within the last two or three days, there are two conflicting Democratic forces at work in this county, one to secure the election of the legislative ticket and the other to keep Taggart in office. Between the two the other candidates are being crushed, with Wilson and Backus only of sufficient force to keep close to Taggart. The political treachery of which the three are guilty in sacrificing Osterman to save themselves a return to the old days, when those great support come from Coy and the crowd he manages. But the fulfillment of that evil possibility seems to be getting further and further away from the gang as its throat-cutting policy is pursued.
